William Thackeray: The Critical Heritage: Volume 68

One is all the time fight- ing against a false situation and in the end deprives oneself of the right to look anywhere ; one would like blindly to take upon oneself and perform some native function or hardship for the sake of balance. There are a lot of different ways people get in trouble in the surf.

Taxation, Growth and Fiscal Institutions: A Political and Economic Analysis (SpringerBriefs in Business)

Ideas about curriculum would also become much less rigid, since curriculum would be determined not by centralized authority but by the learners' and teachers' own awareness of what is relevant and necessary to The Student and Society 4 1 them and their society. My thoughts come not one at a time but in bursts of energy, my mind feels like it will explode, as there is too much manic energy.

Putnam, H. The poet is engaged in imitation, just like a painter, Aristotle argues, and the object of his imitation must in every case be one of three things: either the kind of thing that was or is the case; or the kind of thing that is said or thought to be the case; or the kind of thing that ought to be the case.
